Episcopalians Will Recommend Higher Standard in Music

Commission to Plead With Convention for Better Education in Melody for Clergymen and Organists

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 3 .- An earnest plea for the maintenance of standards of music commensurate with those of the liturgy and the high office of music in the Episcopal Church is made in the report of the joint commission of church music which will be presented to the general convention of the Church here next Wednes-

The report has been prepared by Dr. Wallace Goodrich, of the New England Conservatory of Music, secretary of the commission, which includes several bishops, Dr. Miles Farrow, of New York, and Dr. Peter C. Lutkin, of Chicago. It is an exhaustive history of music, covering a period of more than 1.500 years.

Asks Systematic Instruction The report recommends that standards in church music shall be defined through education, and that facilities for musical education be provided for for musical education be provided for the clergy through the systematic instruction of all candidates for holy orders in the theology schools, and that organists receive authoritative specialized instructions in conservatory and college musical departments and through diocesan conferences.

A specific recommendation is that congregational singing be developed. A hint that elaborate and highly paid church choirs are not altogether essential is seen in a further recommendation that the sole test of the fitness of any choir or musical service shall be in its capacity to inspire and edify the people and to justify its work as an acceptable component part of divine worship.

New York Committee Takes Drastic Steps to Frustrate
Activities of Tiny Borer; Protective Means Found
The Engineering Foundation, in a report made public yesterday, told of methods used by a New York committee, of which E. H Goodrich is chairman, in a year's Investigation of the shipworm problem. The investigation was started in an effort to avert inroada in New York harbor and adjacent points by the tiny marine borer.

The year's work resulted in the discovery of the live seredo nardlis, a common species of the shipworm; in a number of places "on the New Jersey coast and in New York harbor at Sandy Hook, and at Perth Amboy, Elizabethport, Fort Hamilton, Bayonne, Clifton, S. I., and St. George, S. I."

Government, state and city officials aided the investigators. The committee, according to the report, "sent out 1,100 copies of a questionnaire to the owners of waterfront property, seeking information as to present and previous attacks from the shipworm, methods of protection used and the success obtained. In response to these queries, much valuable information was gleaned for further intensive studies of the problem.

"The plans of the committee committee committee campaign for sl.000,000 was opened at the convertion of the organization being held here with a gift to day of $10,000 from the Philadelphia branch of the committee. The fund is to aid Jews in eastern Europe.

DEATHS

"The plans of the committee for future work," the report reads, "provide for a continuance of the biological survey of the harbor to locate additional foci of possible infection and to watch the spread of borers from their present locations, and the chemical and biological study of water conditions will be continued and adjusted to the biological findings." This will enable the investigators to give warning to owners of structures which seem in danger.
